

Sir,

The very reason that XM exists is a tesimont to the poor programming and limited offerings that broadcast radio provides. The percentage of content vs advertising has dropped to a level that I had stopped listening to ANY radio except NPR. Please don't turn this into yet another FCC disaster. Recent FCC rulings on BPL and other critical issues envolving the airways (yes BPL creates RFI for EVERYBODY on amateur radio) have driven me to the conclusion that the FCC seems to think that only the inside the beltway lawyers know what is best. I beg you to set aside all of those wonderful staff recommendations and friend of the court papers and look at the issue yourself.

Thank you,

Gary Scheffler
